9 ways procurement can tame tail spend and reduce risk

Tail spend, spot buys, decentralised purchases – whatever term you use for it, it's a constant headache for procurement to control. Here's how Soldo keeps everything in check, so you don't have to.

Governing your spend

1

Granular spend limits

Apply spend limits by merchant, category or time, so every transaction stays compliant with your policies.

Spending limits

Online payments

Contactless

Auto-lock after one transaction

Geo-control

12 enabled

Ringfenced funds

Create wallets with dedicated budgets for teams, vendors or cost centres, ensuring spend stays in the right place.

2

3

A card in every hand

Issue cards preprogrammed with company T&E policies, so spend stays compliant without employees having to remember the rules.

Making payments

4

Payment cards you control

Go beyond conventional P-cards with company cards that are tied to policy from the start. Apply per-transaction, daily or time-based spend caps, so no-one overshoots.

Apple MacBook Pro 16"

Instant one-off cards

Reduce card sprawl. Issue one-off virtual cards for temporary purchases and limit use to the categories you want, for example, fuel, ad spend or subscriptions.

5

6

Payment card kill-switches

Stop non-compliant spend before it becomes a problem. Get real-time notifications when unusual or out-of-policy spend happens, so you can act before it snowballs.

Reviewing business spend

7

In-app receipt capture

Capture coding and receipts in-app at the point of purchase, eliminating the risk of fraud, including AI-generated receipt fraud.

Real-time monitoring

See all spend as it happens, catch issues before they escalate, and ensure that all transactions are fully traceable.

8

9

Audit-ready control

Keep an immutable record of every approval and transaction for total transparency when it comes to audit time.
